Davorp of any desire to act the gloomy rôle of a Cassandra and predict the approach of a disaster, or of even-seeming to cry " Wolf London, and of Droggists and Storekeepers through- when the danger is imaginary, we yet feel constrained to address a word of warning to the residents of Hongkong generally. It now sixteen years since the great typhoon of 1874 swept over this colony, causing fright. ful mortality and enormous damage to shipping and property. Since that time only one typhoon, and that a small one, has visited Hongkong; these storms so frequent in the Pacific having passed us by with at most a switch of their tail. Prior to the year 1874, typhoons were by no means rare visitors to the Colony. On the 27th July, 1862, one of great severity, doing prodigious damage, passed over Hongkong, Macao, and Canton; and on the 8th September, 1887, another of almost equal violence occurred. In 1870 a typhoon of great strength took place, and this was followed by an other in 1871, also of considerable force. Since 1874, however, the colony and neighbourhood have enjoyed a most fortunate immuni-..$12.00 ty from these des ructive gales, and it is to be feared that a feeling of not exactly contempt for but rather indifference to the danger has grown up in the community. This of course is largely due to the fact that the majority of the present residents have never witnessed a cyclone or typhoon, and can form no conception of the wild fury and herulean strength of these gales. All the terrible scars and unsightly disfigurements caused by them have long since been repaired or healed by the hand of time, and the lying on his back, quite dead, with the fowling cases of private pulsances, where the party affectoral accounts of the destruction wrought by them are too apt to be regarded as exaggerations or the record of phenomenal disaster with automatic Steam Machinery of the unlikely to be repeated. CAPTURE OF PIRATES NEAR

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT. AMOY, 2nd September. About a month ago three native traders left Chiang-chiu, a town situated some twenty-five miles from Amoy in a small junk, for the purpose of buying some pigs at a place called Hing-(Iwa which is a journey of two or three days. Everything went well and wind and weather proved favourable until passing the island of Marchew. Here early one evening they were attacked and boarded by armed pirates, who took possession of the near killing one man and driving two averboard. The two anevivors, who owned the craft, peeded hard for their lives, which, strange to say, were spared by the pirates. who, intending that they should be accorded the privilege of dring by starvation, left them on a very small out of the way island—thinking, no doubt that in a concle of days they would successful to the privations. This was not their fate, however, for on the second or third day of their confinement a stray fishing bost, returning to Amov, happened to see these unfortunate men and brought them back here. On their arrival they want to the Tantai, who immediately despatched the Chinese gunbost Hu-po in search of the desperadoes, and the two survivors went out n her to sid the captain in finding the scope of the outrage and detecting their own junk or the piratical oue. Every effort was made and all vigilance exercised in the search, but for some time no clue was obtained nor any suspicious looking vessel sighted: and it was not until the Hu-no was about returning that the two Chiangchiu men drew the captain's attention to a junk which they recognized as their own, being vulloed across a creek by two men. An armed party was at once desputched in the ship's long-boat and, on nearing the craft, a number of armed men suddenly sprang up from behind the bul-warks and lined the vessel's side, offering every resistance and challenging the boat's orew who. after a short and decisive conflict, effected a boarding, and, with little bloodshed, managed to overpower and secure sixteen desperate looking characters. Three of those captured state, that hay were merely passengers in the junk and had no idea that they were among pirates : these man, who somear very suspicious, having many ugly scars about their bodies, are still confined the Yamen pending further intestigations. The chief of the gang has, probably through trangement with the ruppers, evaded his sentence of ling chi, by strangling him-self in his prison call; and one of the worst-looking villains has sayed his bead by turning informer : the latter states that they were only stragglers from a large band of pirates that are about in these waters. The remaining eleven, who were notorious - coundrels, underwent severatorture and for some time dog redly refused to own their guilt, especially four of them, from whom confession was only extracted last Sunday afternoon; and then, after frightful usage, and in a fainting condition, they were taken from dipped each culprit's finger in the inkand held it out to sign, or blotch, the death sentence which lay upon a red cushion. These pirates were decapitated at half-past ten this morning; on the East beach and outside the City gates. According to the a counts of those foreigners present at the execution, the condemned men were treated very humanely by the Taotai, as

w. daw (wat). W. DOBERCK. September, 1890. ID NECKLACE. lived in the Latin miser named Jean led in the obscure was believed to be fabulous, and was no doubt really very great.
Among his treasures was a celebrated diamond nechlace of immense value. This he concealed. so carefully that he ultimately forgot its hidingplace himself. He sought disigently for weeks, and, failing to find it. became almost insane. This rendered him even less capable of remembrance, and he took to his bed broken in body PAID-UP CAPITAL .. about his house, were both at his bed-side, seeing that the end was near. As the clock in the neighbouring tower tolled one, he ceased his lan muttaring and sat up and shrieked, "I remenber where it is now. I can put my hand on the necklace. For God's sake let me go for it before I forget it again!" Here his weskness and excitement overcame him, and he sank back among his rags, stone dead. Physicians and students are familiar with these sudden outflashings of memory at the great crisis of human fate. Let the reader consider this while we relate an episode in the humble career of a Signalman, Andrew Agge, who may be found on duty in his box at Culgaith, a little station on the Midland, twenty-three miles south of Carliale. Mr. Agge is on duty nearly every day, and must break his fast without leaving his post. The confinement and mental strain tell on the system. The strongest men cannot stand it long without feeling its effects. It makes one think of the passionate exclamation in Tom Hood's " Song of the Shirt." Oh, God I that bread should be so dear,

And flesh and blood so obean." Our friend had been at the same work for THE Steamship many years, although he was only thirty-five when these lines were written. In 1884 he "but I can't est." What he forced down produced no sense of satisfaction or strength. Sometimes he was alarmed at finding he could scarcely walk on account of giddiness. He said to himself, "What if I should be existed with this at some moment when there is trouble on the line, and I need all my wits about me?" Other features of this ail ment were pains in the 224, cum new issue chest and sides, costiveness, yellowakin and eyes bad teste in the mouth, risings of foul gas in the $205, buyers [nom. throat, &c. The doctor said Agge must give up his boufining work or risk utter disability. could not. Wife and children were in the wi So he remained at his post and grew worse, Bu his work was always right, telegrams were properly received and sent, and no train got into trouble through any neglect or fault of his. His 5p. ct. prem., nom. disease-indigestion and dyspensia-took a step [sellers further, and brought on kidney and bladder trouble. The dooter, at Appleby, said, "M ll p.ck. prem., nom. j $42, nom. [sollers Agge, you are polared with the foul stuff in your stomach and blood." His doom seemed to be sealed. It was like a death warrant, Six months more rolled by. On duty one morning he was attacked with so great and so sharn a distress he could neither sit nor stand. He says: "I tumbled down on that looker and lay there all the forenoon. Signals might be given, the telegraph needle might click but I heeded them no more than a man in the grave heeds the besting of the rain againt his own tombatone. He was alone at first, but help arrived, and the SWATOW, AMOY, & F'CHOW. pour signalman was carried home. Physicians laboured on his case without avail. Around his 67 p. ct. pm., sollers bed were his five little children, the mother be-33 p. ct. dia., sellers-ing absent in an institution, to be treated for a serious ailment. Here he lay for weeks, part of the time unconscious. Nothing was to be done but to wait for the end. Then the torpid faculties awakened for a moment. Memory flushed up, and he recalled the fact that a medicine which he had used with benefit years before, and then thrown aside and forgotten, was concealed in a secret place at the signal box. He sent for it, and took a dose. Soon his bowels moved, the kidneys soled, the pain was eased, he felt better. With brightened hope he sent to Carlisle for more. It arrived. Ho used it, and in a few days the doctors were astonished to find their patient out of doors, and on the road to recovery. He regained his health completely, and, in speaking of his experience, said to the writer. " What a wonderful thing is was that, on what promised to be my death-had, I suddenly remembered where I had put that INE Company's Steamship half used bottle of Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup. That fissh of memory probably saved me from death."

CHAPTER IX. A week later Constance Corbyn arrived at Miss Poyton's. Miss Leicester brought her in her carriage; her boxes were to be sent by carrier. This had been done at Miss Peyton's

"I have told my maid that a young friend of mine is coming to stay with me for a time." said, "and it is just as well that she should come with you. You know what arrents are; if they rotice get an idea that she is a paid companion they will be jealous of her and will show their spite in all sorts of little mean, ways; therefore it is just as well they should be kept in the dark on the subject."

Miss Peyton gave a little approving nod, at the appearance of Constance in her quiet hal moniming dress. "That will do very-nicely, my dear, and I am ablined to you for giving way to an old waman's fanoies." "You are very kind and good. Miss Peyton, Continue said gratefully. Tut, tut, my dear, I please myself. Hilds take your friend up to her room; it is next to mine you know. on are going to stop to

She went out with her shopping or i her brougham, for Miss Peyton jobbed a carriage while in town, saving that horse and a coachman were much too troublesome for a single woman. Constance offered to read to her the first morning after breakfast, Miss Peyton decidedly declined the offer. "I can see perf otly woll-my dear, and when can't I shall take to glasses. How navone car put up with being read to when they can read themselves is more than I can understand. which is one of the most disagreeable senations possible, and in the second place, when I read myself I can get through the paper in half an hour, and see all there is worth seeing, whereas a reader has to go on conscientiously, and your time is wasted by listening to a quantity of things in which you have no interest at all. It is just the same with books, some parts you want to read attentively, then you come to a dozen pages of padding which can be skipped with advantage. This morning I want to read, and you can either read or work or go'up and practice on the piane, just as you like. This afternoon you shall go with me to Boosey's and we will get some oldfashioned English songs. Those things you sung last night were very nice, but I don't care either for Italian or French; our old English: songs are worth a bookful of them in my opinion. Of an afternoon we shall be mostly out, and of an evening you must amuse yourself as you best can, for I am out five nights out of six . I dare say you wonder why I do it, and think that I should be more comfortable at home at my age. Perhaps I should have been if I always had comeone like yourself to make my home a little obserful: but it is dull work sitting alone, and around me, and watching the play. Constance enjoyed the afternoon drives much especially when there were no calls to make of nearly every carriage they met. When she not, with each other at the clubs, and play did make calls she expected Constance to accompany her upstairs, and always introduced her as | get to know the county folk and hear the my friend. Now, as a rule, very few of our supposed that she was some friend on a visit and wondered a little who this pretty girl could be but Miss Peyton was not a lady to be questioned and it was assumed that it was some girl whom she had become acquainted with in her many absences from London. House Lane, Que n'e l'oad. startled him by saving :-

"You were talking about Corbyn this afternoon, Bangles. Do you know I was an intimate friend of bis at one time? I was at the same college with him at Oxford, and we were on the same staircase. His rooms were over mine, which was perhaps lucky for him. He was one of those quiet old fellows who don't do arything in partion ar, who neither read nor row, nor play cricket nor drink, so that he never used to have noisy AHAR LODGE .- FURNISHED parties over my head, while I was rather racketty in those days, and he would have fared badly if his rooms had been under mine instead of above. As it was, he used to grumble a good deal. We left college at the same time, and a rather rum thing happened a year or two afterwards. This is quite between ourselves, you kn w, for he lived in the highest odour of respectability down here. I was knocking about on the Continent, just before I got my commishad set his mind on my going into his office, and settling down into a lawyer. I kicked against or a Store. this, and it was not until he saw that the case was quite hopeless that he gave in.

"Well, I was at Cremons, an out-of-the-way place where very few English tourists go; and no wonder, for, except that some fellow or other made fiddles there. I don't know what attractionthere was in the place. However, I got there somehow; and the next morning, while standing on the steps of the hotel, who should come out but Corbyn, with an uncommon y good-looking TANEO. young woman. He flushed up suddenly when he saw me, and looked completely taken aback. saw that he was hesitating whether to recognise me or not; but I suppose he saw no way out of it, so he shook hands and introduced the lady as Mrs. Carbyn. I dined with them afterwards. She was a pleasant, lady-like woman, and not at all fast, either in appearance or manner.

"After she had gone out of the room he said to me: 'By-the-way. Rothsny, you need not mention to anyone you met me here with my wife; my marriage is not generally known yet you see. a private sort of affair. Of course, I said that I would hold my tongue on the sabject; but I could see he was a good deal relieved when I mentioned afterwards that I was expecting every day to hear that I was gazetted into a cavalry regiment, and I had applied for the 15th Hussars, who were on the point of starting for India. I never met him again antil I came had forgotten me till I speke to him one day here view of Hongkon ... "I could see that at first the recognition was a deucedly unpleasant one to him; however we neither of us alluded to the subject of our last meeting. I of erwards learned, of course, that he was a single man and had never been murried. They had been travelli g together some months before I met them learned that by running against a fe low in the corridor of the hotel who had been our scout at college. I had a chat with him for a minute or two, and he told me he had been travelling as a sort of valet and courier with Corbyn ever since he left England. He did not seem to want to talk, so of course I did not ask any questions, it was Corbyo's affair, not mine, and I certainly thought at the time they were married, though by his confusion and his asking me to say nothing about it. I guessed there was something irregular in the business. But of course whom I came here and heard that he had never been married. I saw how matters stood. "Rum, isp't it, how the last sort of men would be likely to suspect-and I should certainly never have suspected Corbyn-go in for this sort of thing, when they think it safe to do so. Of course I should never think of telling this to anyone down here. He died in the edour of sanctity, and though I don't suppose he was a bit worse than the rest of us, I have a quiet smile to myself sometimes when I hear them talking about him." General Bangles related three or four stories apropos of that which he had just heard, and then Robert made on excuse to leave them and hurried back to the lodgings. (To be continued.)
